

Nick Serianni

MIC Business & Finance Task Manager

Nick Serianni is the MIC Program's Business and Finance Task Manager for the Florida Department of Transportation's (FDOT) Miami Intermodal Center (MIC). In his capacity, Mr. Serianni serves as manager for all business and financial planning matters and has led the effort to accomplish commercial joint development in conjunction with the MIC transportation facilities.

Mr. Serianni has coordinated the development of an initial-phase, five-year MIC Work Program; facilitated the award of $443M in federal aid to permit initial-phase program implementation; led contract negotiations between the client and Miami-Dade County on MIC Program obligations and financial responsibilities; and led the development of a procurement process to enable the client to undertake program components using the construction manager at risk (CM@Risk) project delivery system.

Mr. Serianni has over 25 years of professional transportation experience and has served in a management capacity for the majority of his career. Since establishing his own transportation consulting and government relations firm in 1999, he has been involved in several other major transportation projects in a program management/facilitation capacity. These include, among others, the City of Miami Streetcar Project, the Downtown Orlando Intermodal Center, the Lynx (central Florida) light-rail program and a statewide initiative originally led by Amtrak to introduce higher quality intercity passenger rail service in Florida.

Prior to starting his own consulting business, Mr. Serianni held several high ranking positions within FDOT. He joined FDOT after 12 years of service with the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation where he held a variety of staff and management-level positions in the transportation planning and policy development area.

While serving with FDOT, he was initially appointed as the Department's Federal Programs Director, handling all major Department inspections with the federal government and professional associations of national significance. In this capacity he led the Department's efforts in favorably shaping federal transportation legislation and national transportation policy statements.

Subsequently, Mr. Serianni served as FDOT's State Public Transportation Administrator where he managed program development, regulatory and policy-related functions for all non-highway transportation modes, including aviation, public transit, rail, high-speed ground transportation and seaports. He led the Department's efforts in developing new programs to assist with the financing projects in the areas of public transit, seaport development and intermodal development. He also led the Florida high speed rail initiative through the award of a franchise to the Florida Overland Express (FOX).

He last served FDOT as Assistant Secretary for District Operations, where he provided operational management oversight for eight Department district offices and the Department's Motor Carrier Compliance Office. He also served as a registered Department lobbyist.

Mr. Serianni graduated from Indiana University of Pennsylvania in 1971 with a B.A. degree in Geography/Urban Regional Planning.
