NEARLY THERE: The rental car mega-hub set to serve Miami International Airport is 99% complete, the Florida Department of Transportation's Gary Donn told Miami-Dade commissioners at a committee meeting last week. The 3.4-million-square-foot center has yet to receive its temporary certificate of occupancy, but already some rental car companies have begun building out their spaces, he said. "We're still on track for an opening date of early May 2010 to begin the operation." Sixteen car companies now operating in and near the airport are to move into the hub, part of the state's Miami Intermodal Center project.
